NEVER SAY NEVER, AGAIN!

I remember Sean Connery talking about this on (I think) the Merv Griffin Show back in the day and I thought about what a remorseful and sad conversation this was about making public iron-clad commitments which in his case was to NEVER play James Bond like every again only to returning to the role several years after his very public proclamation and press conference.

In many ways, I am at that Sean Connery moment in my role as editor here at WWWG and like Sean, I truly regret that I ever made such a fuss about NEVER publishing a Temple Book by the Starving Artist previously known as Emil.

Addiction Clinic that spread all about the Third Ward ending with the Governor declaring martial law after the local ward police were swamped by streets full of infected people using common sense and openingly misusing proper pronouns at random will along with an equal number of action verbs exercised in plain view of WOKE, polite denizens; Emil became obsessed with his current fixation over something called the Multiverse, Reptilian Overlords and started a brutal attack on a very rich, well-connected billionaire Mister Ahriman and what Emil insists on calling Ahriman's "WEF Goonies" much to the dismay of our legal department here at WWWG. Looking back much as I am sure Sean did at his moment of truth; I would give nearly anything to have Emil do a Temple Book.

NEVER SAY NEVER, AGAIN!

Such seems not to be our luck and we (I) must now live with the consequences of our words.
As my wise Chinese barkeep once to me in Shanghai as we were complaining to our difficulty in getting to our arranged job in Nanking; he looked up from wiping the bar and said:
"Be careful as to what you wish as it may come true!"
I should have thought of that before!

Just now ·

While (at the time) I never figured that I would have the honor to lunch with Mr. Gandhi...Like...ya just never know!

Dining with Gandhi...

of providing wholesome,
great tasting food.
Food that came fresh from the fields and farms to our front doors
To this day, we prepare our soups, focaccias, muffins & prepared salads from scratch with care and integrity.
Over the years,
our simple idea has become a promise. One that comes from nature, to us, to you.
